Dear Parishioners,

Continuing with the importance of ministries in the church, I would like to emphasize the importance of the vocation to the Permanent Diaconate. We have been blessed with having a number of deacons in training assigned to our parish family, and they have been a great assistance to the life of the parish in many different ways. Having our own deacon to assist me in the different sacraments and in the preparations for the sacraments would be a great help. A deacon can proclaim the Gospel and give a homily; prepare and baptize children; celebrate marriage outside the mass; visit the home bound and those in the hospital; and many more functions. Please look around our parish for men who you think would be good candidates for this important ministry, and then ask them to think about taking this step in faith.

A Reflection on the Readings

Over the last few years, we've learned much about the power of words. When spoken aloud, they can heal or destroy, calm or incite, unite or divide. We have begun to understand as well that not only the word itself but also who speaks it—and coming from the mouths of the privileged, while motivational speeches to make better choices often dispirit those with limited good options.

In this Gospel passage from Luke, we witness Jesus's first public act of ministry. The very Word of God made flesh, anointed by the Spirit, speaks the prophetic word handed to him. Then he sits, the traditional teaching posture. However, Jesus provides neither lecture nor exegetical analysis. He simply reveals himself as the place of encounter in whom the Lord's word is fulfilled.

Did the powerful present that day, who gained their wealth and influence by exploiting unjust systems, hear Jesus's words as an endorsement of their good fortune? When Jesus proclaimed liberty to captives and good news to the poor, did they think he was speaking of them?

The Lord's words are indeed Spirit and life and glad tidings to the poor. But as we will see in next week's Gospel passage, those same words bring condemnation to those who too quickly believe they are meant for them.

Each Has A Role

'Now the body is not a single part, but many.'

1 Corinthians 12:14

One reason I love sports is that I love being on a team. A good team has diverse roles and responsibilities, but when everyone is doing their part, it moves almost as a single unit, each person trusting that teammates will hold their position and play their role. The diverse roles make the team stronger and more responsive to the challenges it will face.

There is unity and strength in diversity. In today's reading, Paul makes this point: The body is a collection of parts working together, without division. He extends the analogy to Christ's body, of which we are all a part. Each of us has a role, and to the extent that we fulfill our role—however modest or however grand, whether ordained, married or single—we are fulfilling God's will for us and making our whole parish, community and Church stronger.

Jesus, give me the humility to be mindful always that I am but one part of the whole.
